Durham will play host Oct. 5 to 26 senior government officials who are being trained to assume important State Department posts under the department's Senior Seminar in Foreign Policy. Mayor Wense Grabarek announced Tuesday.

The group, consisting of officers of the American Foreign Service and the armed forces, will include Durham as one of the cities they will visit during the year to see first-hand some of the country's political, economic and social problems and achievements, Grabarek said.

A tentative schedule prepared by the seminar calls for the group to tour the Research Triangle, visit a tobacco warehouse and witness a tobacco auction, tour a cigarette manufacturing plant and take a bus tour of Duke University.

Mayor Grabarek said the Durham Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the mayor's office, will handle advance planning for the group.

The Senior Seminar, held annually since 1958, is a component of the Foreign Service Institute of the State Department. It is the most advanced program of studies in international relations and foreign policy offered by any agency of the United States government, according to Ambassador G. Lewis Jones, seminar coordinator.

Also included on the seminar's agenda are visits to Seymour Johnson and Pope Air Force bases.

Members of the seminar include: Manuel Abrams, counselor for economic affairs, American Embassy, the Hague; Capt. Dean L. Axene, commanding officer of the USS Calhoun; Bernard Blankenheimer, director, Africa division of the Bureau of International Commerce; William C. Burdett, Foreign Service Inspection Corps; Richard M. Cashin, director of the Office of Central African Affairs; David C. Cuthell, director of the Office of Southwest Pacific Affairs.

Also, Col. John E. Dwan, chief of the Congressional activities division of the office of the chief of staff; John R. Heidemann, chief of the CIA's China Division; Harold E. Howland, deputy assistant secretary of the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs; Alexander Klieforth, deputy assistant director of the United States Information Agency; Wilfred Koplowitz, international relations officer, European Affairs.

Also, John Lacey, Consul General, Singapore; Howard P. Mace, special assistant to the deputy assistant secretary of Budget and Compliance; Charles A. Mann, director of USAID mission to Viet Nam; George R. Marotta, policy planning staff, Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs; Howard Meyers, director of operations of the office of deputy assistant secretary of politico-military affairs; Daniel E. Moore, assistant director, USIA; Col. Maury K. Moore, deputy chief of staff plans of the Air Force.

Also, Edward W. Mulcahy, deputy director of the Office of Eastern and Southern African Affairs; Col. Howard T. Pittman, commanding officer, Headquarters Battalion, Second Marine Division; William L. Rodman, agricultural attache in Canberra; Morris Rothenberg, director of the Office of Research and Analysis for Soviet Bloc; Harry Shlaudeman, assistant director of the Office of Caribbean Affairs; Melbourne Spector, counselor for administration to the president; and
